

Waves of People

The Celts were here before the Romans. The Romans arrived although the Romans were here first. However, it was the Normans who built the new castle. Many Irish, Scottish and Cornish people came here, because the coal was here in Newcastle. After the Second World War, people from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh came here to live. Recently people from places like Poland, Slovakia and the Czech Republic have come here to work.

Helenka, Bridgewater School.

Waves of People

The Celts were here first, but the Romans built the first bridge over the River Tyne. The Anglo-Saxons came after the Romans had left. However hard they tried, the Anglo-Saxons couldn't stop the Normans taking over England. The Normans built a castle when they came here. Many people came to work in the coal mines, but many also came to build ships. New people have come to live in Newcastle, because it is a good city to live in.

The castle built by the Normans    The Mauretania - one of the great ships built on the Tyne

Miroslav, Bridgewater School

Newcastle's History

The Celts were as ferocious as wolves.
Hadrian's Wall was like a big tree and looked like a snake.
The Lindisfarne Gospels were as beautiful as a princess.
The coalmines were as deep as a mole digs.
The ships built on the Tyne were as big as a ferry.

Hadrian's Wall snaking across the land

The beautiful Lindisfarne Gospels

Callum, Bridgewater School

The History of Our City and Region

It was the Celts who were the first group in our area and they called the river, the River Tyne. The Romans built the first bridge over the River Tyne and they built a huge wall called Hadrian's Wall. It went across the country like a huge snake.

The Anglo-Saxons came after the Romans and they brought the first version of the English language. Bede was a famous Anglo-Saxon and he was the first English historian.

The Venerable Bede

The Venerable Bede

The Vikings attacked Tynemouth and they brought more English words with them, which we use today.

The Normans built a new castle, which gives our city its name.

Lots of people moved to Newcastle, because there was lots of coal and that would keep them warm.

Whittle Colliery in North-east England

The Mauretania was a ship that was as big as a building.

Bangladeshis, Slovaks and Czechs have come here recently and they have brought their skills and their cooking with them.

Amani, Bridgewater School

Waves of People

The Celts were as brave as a lion.

The Vikings were as ferocious as a gorilla.

The ships built on Tyneside were as big as a massive house.

Matei, Bridgewater School

Waves of People

The Celts were as brave as tigers.

The Vikings were as ferocious as gorillas.

The coalmines were as dark as a panther.

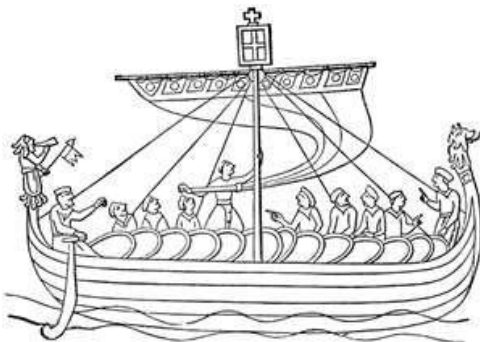

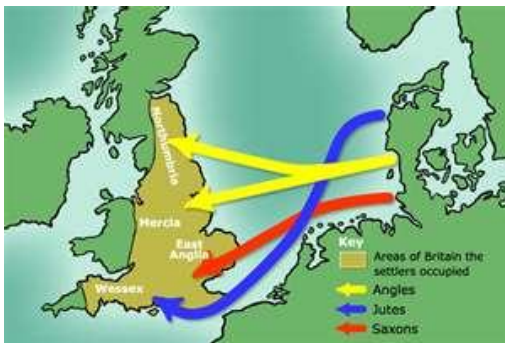

The ships built on Tyneside were as big as a castle.

Sebastian, Bridgewater School

The History of Newcastle

My name is Jacob. I am from the Czech Republic, but now I live in Newcastle. I go to school at Bridgewater. I am learning English. I have been learning History about groups of people who came to Newcastle.

Jacob, Bridgewater School

Waves of People

The Celts were here first, before the Romans came here. The Romans arrived although the Celts were here first. The Anglo-Saxons brought the English language with them, because that was the language they spoke. When the Anglo-Saxons had settled, the Vikings came after and they attacked. However, it was the Normans who built the new castle.

Many Irish, Scottish and Cornish people came here, because Newcastle was a good place and it had coal there. After the Second World War, people from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh came here to Newcastle. Recently people from places like Poland, Slovakia and the Czech Republic have come here last to live.

Anna, Bridgewater School

Describing Our History

The Celts were as brave as lions.

The Vikings were as ferocious as tigers.

The coalmines were as dark as space at night.

The ships built on Tyneside were as big as a castle.

Aneta, Bridgewater School

Waves of People

The Celts were here first, but the Romans built the first bridge over the River Tyne. The Anglo-Saxons came after the the Romans had left. The Vikings came so the the Anglo-Saxons had to fight them.

Anglo-Saxons

A Viking ship

Although they fought at first, the Anglo-Saxons and Vikings learnt to live together. However hard they tried, the Anglo-Saxons couldn't stop the Normans taking over England. The Normans built a castle, when they came here. Many people came to work in coalmines, however many also came to build ships. New people have come to live in Newcastle, because it is a good city to live in.

Roland, Bridgewater School

People Who Came to Tyneside

The Celts were here first, before the the Romans came.

However, it was the Normans who built the castle.

Patrick, Bridgewater School

Waves of People

The Celts were here first, before the Romans came here.
The Romans arrived, although the Celts were here first.

The Anglo-Saxons brought the the English language with them, because that is what they spoke. When the Anglo-Saxons had settled, the Vikings came after and they attacked.

However, it was the Normans who built the new castle.

Many Irish, Scottish and Cornish people came here because Newcastle was a good place and coal was here.

After the Second World War, people from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh came here to Newcastle. Recently people from places like Poland, Slovakia and the Czech Republic have come here last to live.

Erika, Bridgewater School.